PRICE TWO CENTS

THIRD PIANO IS ADDED TO LIST OF PRIZES OFFERED BY THIS PAPER

A flood of ballots pouring in from all sections. Great interest is manifested in every community as is shown by the large number of votes cast. Every candidate has received votes. "Hustle" is the watchword of the contestants and many workers are in the field.

SUBSCRIPTION BALLOTS PILE UP VOTES

Awarding the pianos fully explained. The floating vote cuts a big figure. Systematic work counts for a great deal. Women can vote in this contest. The busy time is here. First prize piano displayed at the Andrews-Schwenk Drug Store.

The REPUBLICAN contest is gradually developing into a spirited one. Hundreds of people are interested and scores are already working for their preferred candidates. The loyalty and spirit of friends and members is being aroused and everyone seems bent on doing something if it is only to gather a single voting coupon.

This contest is a little different in its scope and purpose from the average newspaper contest and the readers of the REPUBLICAN realize it. Most people will do more for their church, lodge, or school in a contest of this kind than they will for an individual. Through giving the prize pianos to organizations hundreds of persons will be benefitted.

This contest promises to be the most exciting event ever held in southern Indiana if the reports from all sections of the county are any criterion.

GREATER LIBERALITY—THREE PIANOS.

It was not enough for this paper to offer to give away two valuable pianos but the REPUBLICAN has determined to give away a third piano—the awarding of which is fully explained in the rules and conditions of the contest published in the full page advertisement.

Three pianos will be given away to the three most deserving and popular organizations in the county. We are certain that this great liberality will be appreciated by our readers and the members of the contesting organizations.

The third piano will be identical in value with the second prize and will be shortly placed on exhibition for all to see and judge of its excellence.

This offer of a third piano should be an incentive for the organizations down the line to exert extra effort to climb to the top.

The vote is not large yet and a few hours or minutes work among friends and members will put the lowest candidate in the list at the top.

VOTES ARE EASY TO GET

It is not a hard matter to get votes. They can now be had for the asking. A few words to your friends and fellow members will do the work and you will be surprised at what you can accomplish. Votes are now coming who have not yet allied themselves with any one candidate. Their votes and subscription renewals are easily obtained by the first person who approaches them and explains the object of the contest. Also, many persons are apt to assist those who appear to have the best chance to win. Get after the floating vote and those who don't care how they vote and you will get your share of it.

SYSTEMATIC WORK THE BEST

Many of the candidates have already effected a working organization and others are organizing this week. Better work can be done and more votes gathered by a systematic arrangement of your working force. A committee arrangement with strong capable leaders, is the most effective plan. Every organization has at least one or two persons who are capable of taking the lead in an affair of this kind and it is their duty to do so. Some of the contestants have selected places where votes may be left for mailing to this office. This plan is a good one and will save postage.

WOMEN CAN VOTE

As often as they like in this election. The suffrage is free to the fair sex. Whether single, married or a "Merry Widow," you can vote. When the ladies take an active part in the contest it is a sure sign there will be something doing.

TO WIN IS AN HONOR

To be greatly desired. Every contestant is, of course, actuated by a desire to possess one of the beautiful instruments for their assembly room but the honor of winning in the contest is destined to overshadow any desire for gain. Some of the workers declare that they care as much for piling up a big vote as they do for getting one of the pianos. Three worthy and deserving candidates are going to get fine pianos for their assembly room and the REPUBLICAN does not particularly care who they are. The nominations are still open for deserving organizations.

THE BUSY TIME IS HERE

Now is the time to get busy. Get on the band wagon and make a noise like you are after a piano. Talk up; if you can't talk make signs. A sign will stop a railroad train, and if you do something people will think you mean business. Turn back your cuffs roll up your sleeves, kick over your chair, and dip into the real spirit of the thing. Its lots of fun. This is just a friendly contest in which no favors will be shown any contestant. There will be no stuffed ballot boxes at this election. The only ballot stuffing will be done by the candidates in a legitimate manner. No votes will be cast except they go through the hands of the contest editor.

Conductor Carroll Bush, of the B. & O., will probably leave about next Monday for Needles, Cal., on a three months leave of absence. If pleased with the country and the climate it is very probable that he will accept employment with one of the western roads, send for his family and make his future residence there. Some of the railroad boys from Seymour have already located there, and their accounts of nice work and good pay sounds good to Mr. Bush.

SUBSIDY

One Township Favors Proposition And One Oppos. s.

The preliminary survey of the Cincinnati, Madison & Western traction line has been completed, and the engineers are now making estimates on bridges, fills, etc., preparatory to commencing the actual construction of the road. The line, as surveyed, is twenty-eight miles long and extends from Madison to Scottsburg. Scottsburg people have been seeing visions of a greater Scottsburg for some time and the coming of another interurban road is hoped to boost the town enough to make up for the setback it has received by the recent serious fires. The town took a long step forward with the coming of the Indianapolis and Louisville Traction line and then followed in close succession two of the most serious fires the town had ever experienced followed by still others which wiped out some of the best of the remaining buildings. Direct communication with Madison and the intervening country by trolley will be a great benefit to them and will advertise the town still further. The road will be even a greater benefit to the city of Madison which has a single railroad and the Ohio river as the only avenues of travel in and out of the city except over rough country roads the county having less than one fourth the amount of gravel roads that is to be found in Jackson county. Less than one-seventh of the public roads of the county had been improved up to 1905. It seems hardly probable, even if this proposed road is to be built, that construction work would begin in earnest earlier than next May, which would possibly make the opening of the road some time in 1911.

At the election in Saluda township Saturday the proposition for a subsidy to the C. M. & W. Traction Co. was carried, the vote being 65 for and 56 against in precinct one, and 122 for and 22 against in precinct two. In Republican township the subsidy was defeated, the south precinct voting for the subsidy by 42 majority, the north precinct 94 majority against it. At a previous election the subsidy was a tie in Republican township and the result of the vote at this second election, held only a few weeks later, would indicate that the proposition has been in losing favor. However, if this failure to vote a subsidy should send the new road through some other township, those who have helped to defeat the proposition may some day be sorry for it.

SCHOOL ITEMS

Steady Progress Being Made in all Departments.

Superintendent J. A. Linke has visited every room in the city this week and finds that the schools are in excellent condition. Prof. Linke finds that the needs of the various buildings can best be known by personal investigation and will make these visits from time to time throughout the year.

An especial effort is to be made by the school authorities to find out who the truants are and to get them in school. A teachers' meeting will be held this evening and the enumeration lists will be examined. The truant officer will be in the city Thursday and assist in the work of getting the truants back in school.

Much interest is being manifested at this time in the musicale which will be held Tuesday November 23 at the Majestic theatre. The boys' glee club is practicing every day and will have an important place on the programme. A large chorus is also preparing several songs and an excellent programme will be given.

William Owen, who will appear in Seymour Tuesday in the Shakespearean plays, "As You Like It" and "Merchant of Venice," has consented to address the high school Tuesday morning. The William Owen company appeared recently under the auspices of Indiana University at Bloomington, and also played at Champaign, Ill., and Lafayette under the direction of the universities. Although the capacity of the high school assembly room is limited, the public is invited to attend and hear the address of Mr. Owen and as many visitors will be accommodated as possible.

Arrangements are being made by Prof. Linke to have prominent educators over the state, address the high school from time to time. This is being done in many of the schools and it is found to be a very valuable feature.

Robert J. Aley, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Superintendent T. F. Fitzgibbon of Columbus, Prof. E. C. Jermon of Greensburg, and other prominent men have already consented to talk to the school sometime during the present school year.

W. F. Kamman has again taken up his class work after a vacation of several weeks.

MARRIED.

HALL-RUSSELL

Miss Bessie Downing, of the Hoosier grocery, went to Brownstown this morning to attend the wedding of Charles Hall and Miss Gertrude Russell, both of Crothersville, which occurred this afternoon. The party will be entertained at a wedding supper this evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Russell. After supper a reception will be given at the home of the groom's father, Ed Hall. Both are well known in the vicinity of Crothersville and are respected young people. They will continue to reside at Crothersville. n11d

DIED.

MAY—Lawrence May, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer May, died Wednesday morning, November 10, 1909, at five o'clock at their home on S. Pine street. Age 1 month and 25 days. It was taken to a physician yesterday and was found to be suffering with thrush. This and other complications caused its death. The funeral services will occur at the residence Thursday afternoon at two o'clock conducted by the Rev. F. M. Huckleberry.

CAUGHT IN SHAFT

Employee At Paper Mill Seriously Injured.

Charles Hall, an employee at the Brownstown paper mills, was seriously injured in an accident about 9:30 o'clock this morning. He was throwing off a belt when he was caught by the line shaft. The large bone of the upper arm was broken near the shoulder and there was a fracture in the shoulder joint. His upper lip was badly lacerated and he received two cuts in the forehead which are not serious. He was rendered unconscious but had partly regained consciousness by the time a physician arrived a few minutes later. His injuries are quite serious but he will probably recover. However, he will have a scarred lip and he will be exceedingly fortunate if his shoulder should entirely recover. He is a young man, thirty-eight years of age and has a wife and three or four small children. He formerly resided at Brownstown where he was employed in the paper mills, but a few years ago he moved away. He returned there from Lafayette only a few weeks ago and accepted employment at the mills again. His condition was all that could have been expected this afternoon though he was suffering considerably as he probably will for several days.

Making Fast Time.

As business generally over the country continues to improve, the railroads begin to revise their schedules in order to reduce their time between all of the more important cities, particularly where there is strong competition. There has been a rumor that the time of the Queen-City Limited and the Mound City Limited, the two fastest trains on the B. & O., running between Cincinnati and St. Louis, is to be materially reduced. However, this would hardly be possible with their present facilities for making speed. These are not heavy trains already and there is no opportunity to economize in this direction. There is a report current that a new type of engine is to be put on some of the passenger runs which will make it possible to move nearly annihilate distance than at present. A great many of the engines in use on this road have seen their best days but they are kept in the service in an attempt toward economy during a period when business is at an ebb. If all of these engines are kept on the road during the winter season it will mean many and frequent repairs or a great loss of time and delayed trains, or possibly all of these. The B. & O. now has some strong competition between Cincinnati and St. Louis and it is important that they make as good time as can be made with regularity and with safety.

TO BAR UNBIDDEN GUESTS.

Even Buckingham Palace Is Not Sacred from Their Intrusions.

That uninvited guests not infrequently put in an appearance at big parties has long been a well known fact in London. These intrusions generally have for their scene the political "crushes" where naturally a goodly number of the guests are not very well known to the host or hostess, but, according to London Truth, there were instances of the kind at no less important a gathering than the first state ball of the season at Buckingham palace. This became known and the lord chamberlain therefore sent a card with each invitation for the second ball, which had to be shown on arrival at the palace.

"At one time," adds Truth, "such outrageous impertinence would have been impossible without immediate detection, but the various lists have been so much enlarged of late years that the palace is thronged with people utterly unknown to the lord chamberlain's officials, whereas in former days every guest could be identified, and, indeed, everybody knew everybody, at least by sight."

According to another authority, arrangements are being made to put a stop to the intrusion of uninvited guests at London parties. It is a well known fact, this authority says, that two persons have been guilty of this piece of gross impertinence, and it is satisfactory to know that they are now marked, and should they have the temerity to appear at any assemblage uninvited they will be requested to withdraw without any further parleying.

These two individuals—a mother and daughter, by the way—were present at the marriage of Lord Villiers and Lady Cynthia Needham, last October. They appeared again at Londonderry House at a reception given by Lady Londonderry early in the present year, and last year put in an appearance at Lady Lansdowne's reception at Lansdowne House.

Many well-dressed persons attend weddings, pretending that they are representing a newspaper, and they have been known to go on to the house where the reception is held. Of course it is very difficult for a hostess to know her guests personally, as so many of them may be relatives or friends of the bridegroom and his family.

There is no doubt that hostesses would be wise if they sent a small invitation card, to be presented at the door, whenever they give entertainments on a large scale. Indeed, several persons invariably take their cards with them, as some years ago a lady well known in the social world went to a ball given by a great lady, who approached the guest and said, "I never invited you to my party," whereupon the lady triumphantly produced the invitation card, which she handed to the hostess and immediately left the house.

IN NEED OF FARMERS.

Urgent Necessity for Men of Intelligence on Eastern Farms.

A Georgia newspaper, commenting on the cry from one of the counties of that big State for 1,000 more farmers, remarks that there are 146 counties in the State which need as many. The chance of getting farmers for the neglected Georgia land is better than the chance of getting good farmers. All the Eastern and Northern States sadly need good farmers, competent, intelligent, up-to-date men to till the soil properly and get from it the largest and best crops with the least possible expenditure of toil and money. The New York Times says, a fair share of both capital and labor is needed in agriculture, of course, but intelligence, a good measure of enthusiasm, the will to learn and the ability to apply learning practically are more essential.

New York State needs farmers of the best sort as badly as Georgia needs them, though perhaps not so many; 146,000 swooping down at once on the abandoned, neglected or ill-managed farms of the Mohawk valley and the upper and lower tier counties would scarcely be able to find land enough to work on. There are some intelligent farmers in New York and New England, but not many in comparison with the poor and thriftless ones. The modern farmer must adapt himself to modern conditions. He should know how to market crops as well as to grow them. He should not be content to do things the way his honorable but benighted forefathers did them. He need not, if he have his wits about him, be controlled by middlemen. His market opportunities are enormous. The development of chemistry and mechanics has greatly increased his chances of making agriculture profitable.

MEXICO WANTS MULES.

Difficulties of the Vera Cruz Farmer Offer Fine Inducements.

One of the chief problems for the farmer in Vera Cruz is the transportation of his crops to market, his produce paying always a heavy tribute in the way of freight before it gets to the consumer, according to Daily Consular and Trade Reports. The heavy cost is due to the rugged, broken character of the country and the deep mud, which naturally makes it difficult and expensive to handle freight. Wagon roads cannot be built save at enormous cost. The railroads furnish transportation at fair rates to those situated on their lines, but for the producer off the lines of railroads the mule is the only hope of getting out his corn or coffee, or whatever crop he may raise.

It naturally results that there is a constant demand for good mules all over the State, by both freighters and planters, at good and even high prices. Very few mules are bred in the State, and the supply is brought almost entirely from the interior of the country. Last year ninety were brought from the United States for the city of Vera Cruz alone. Freight charges, if they are shipped by rail, or driving expenses when they are brought in on foot, add very considerably to the price of mules. An unbroken 3 or 4 year old commands on an average not far from $125 Mexican money (one Mexican dollar or peso equals 49.8 cents). It seems strange, therefore, in view of the constant demand and good prices paid, that no attempt has been made to raise mules for the market.

For the breeding of mules land can be secured in large bodies at $10 to $15 Mexican money an acre. The industry can best be carried on in connection with cattle raising, as mules cannot be run on the low swampy lands on which cattle do splendidly. On a plantation the higher levels not subject to inundation can be utilized for mules during the rainy season, and during the dry season they can run on all the lands of the coast and foothill regions. Made pastures are necessary to insure an abundance of feed during the year, but no shelter or grain is required at any season of the year. It might be well to provide large sheds to give shelter during excessively wet weather, but this is not absolutely necessary.

GOING BACK INTO THE PAST.

Some Smiles, and Some Frowns, but Recollections Are Much the Same.

They do say that one of the things a fellow remembers is the first time he ever went courting a girl. And it is one of the last things he wants to forget, even if she turned him down later on.

It is not the trial now that it was back in the good old days. In the country districts folks lived in houses of one or two rooms, or three at most, so that when a fellow went sparking he had to face the whole family, and you may depend upon it that the whole family faced him. Sometimes they didn't try to make life pleasant for him. This was specially true of the girl's younger brothers and sisters.

Do you remember how big your feet felt, and the trouble you had to find places for your hands, and how difficult it was to keep up a conversation? But if you had grit enough you would stay or die right there.

But you never forgot it, and you never will. Nor will you ever quite forget the effort necessary to get your courage up to the point of asking her if you might call on her, nor how glad you were if she said you might, nor how mean you felt if she refused your request. As a frost this beat the June affair of '59.

One Comfort.

Dick was a very clean little boy, and dirt disgusted him. One day he found a poor little starved kitter crouching in a ditch at the roadside and he brought the wet, muddy little wail home with him.

He took it to the hydrant and carefully rinsed off all the mud, but the shock was too great for the sick kitty and the breath of life departed.

Dick brought her to his mother, who exclaimed at the sight of the wet, drooping kitten, "Why, Dick, what have you done?"

"She was all mud and I washed her," Dick replied. "Oh, Dick," his mother said, sorrowfully, "I'm afraid she's dead." Dick looked shocked and grieved for a moment, then his face lighted up with a gleam of comfort as he exclaimed:

"Well, she died clean, anyway."—The Delineator.

Heights to Be Attained.

A crochety old farmer of Massachusetts had trouble with his neighbor, and as a result sought his counsel—ex-Congressman Samuel L. Powers, says Lippincott's.

"I want you to write him a letter and tell him this here foolishness he's got to stop," he declared firmly. "I know what I want to say, but I ain't got the larin' to put it just right."

"What do you want to say?" Mr. Powers asked.

"Wa-all, begin by tellin' him that he's the durndest, lyin'est, thiev'in'est, low-downest skunk on arth—and then work up."

More Tangible.

"I suppose," remarked a friend of the aviator, "that you would hate to bump into some fellow's air castle while flying."

"Oh, yes," replied the aviator, "but I would hate much more to bump into the chimney of some fellow's terrestrial dwelling."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Contrariwise.

"I wonder," said Amelia, pensively, "why they call all the German cures something-or-other 'bad'?"

"Because," responded wise Reginald, "with the usual perversity of human nature, people expect them to make good."—Baltimore American.

TRUMPET CALLS.

Ram's Horn Sounds a Warning Note to the Unredeemed.

The man who would walk with God must have clean feet.

Every good cause is most hindered by the people who are unfaithful in little things.

There is no place in God's service for either a lazy man or a coward.

The friend of God is never the foe of man.

When riches fly they generally do it with strong wings.

It is not doing wrong that damns men. It is their love for sin.

The great question is not how long we are going to live, but how?

Whoever tries to make others happy gets paid for it in heaven's money.

The man who is down on excitement in religion, never objects to it in politics.

The man who digs a pit for another to fall into, is digging a grave for himself.

Every boy believes his father could have killed Goliath, if he had had David's chance.

Those who can patiently bear their little trials will not break down under their big ones.

If you take your boy to see the procession, don't whip him for wishing to go to the circus.

The prayer of a grateful man will be sure to please God, whether it pleases anybody else or not.

HORSESHOE MYTH.

Traced Back to the Greeks and Their Sea God Poseidon.

Of all the emblems for good fortune the horseshoe stands among the first. Everybody knows it is unlucky to pass a horseshoe on the road without picking it up. It is a luck emblem of the greatest power. Again, we are indebted for this statement to old tales, centuries in age, that have descended from father to son, from mother to daughter, through the years.

The old myths repay research. The luck of the horseshoe has a most respectable beginning. It is traced to the religion of the old Greeks and their sea god Poseidon, who was identical with the Roman sea god Neptune.

To Poseidon horses were sacred, and to him they were sacrificed. Poseidon was believed to have created the first horse when he struck the ground with his trident and a horse sprang from the hole, which afterward became a spring. The sea god was the lord of springs. To him all springs were ascribed. In the shape of a horse he sometimes wandered by the shores of his ocean domain, and where he struck his hoofs deeply there the waters gushed out and permanent springs were found.

This is the reason why horseshoes are reckoned lucky. Going to the root of the matter, one sees a nature myth as the root principle. From the sea all rain comes and to the sea all springs owe primal origin, and to the rain and the fresh waters, sea derived, we owe all fertility on earth.

The old Greeks therefore worshipped Poseidon as the fortune giver through his springs. They gave him horses, his precious beasts, and they adored the footprints of horses when they found them, for they might be the very footprints of the god himself.

When horses came to be shod the transition of the luck emblem from the footprint itself to the shoe mark—practically the same thing—was easy.

Pegasus, the winged horse, from whose hoofs the water springs gushed copiously when he came to earth, has been credited with the origin of the horseshoe luck.

The horseshoe was a specific against earthquakes. It would keep a house safe from harm by earth shaking. Again one perceives the sea myth—Poseidon was the shaker of the earth.

Rouget De L'Isle's House.

The sale of Rouget de l'Isle's old house in Paris has revived the old question whether he was the composer as well as the author of the "Marseillaise," the Dundee Advertiser says.

The air has also been claimed for a violinist of some note in his day, named Alexandre Boucher, who improvised it—so the story goes—to oblige a colonel whom he had met at a hotel. The colonel, so the story continues, hummed it to the bandmaster of his regiment, who wrote it out and orchestrated it, and Rouget de l'Isle wrote words for it (merely altering six-eight time into common time) at the suggestion of the jailer of the prison in which he was confined in Marseilles.

What truth there is in the story it is practically impossible to say; but there is no doubt that Alexandre Boucher, who lived to be 92, told it to a journalist in 1860 two years before his death.

Proof.

Knicker—Do you think Shakespeare was a lawyer? Bocker—No; if he had been he would have made a fortune deciding whether Hamlet was mad.

What will it profit a man to behave in all other particulars, and then be feared because he talks too much?

Many a woman trusts a man with her affections who wouldn't lend him 30 cents.

HUMAN HAIR FAIR.

Many Shorn Heads Among the Peasants, Who Richly Profited.

The great human hair fair which has just been concluded at Limoges has proved most emphatically that the craze for false hair is not lessening but increasing. Those peasants who have abundant locks varying in shades from black to golden and all tones of gray sell their hirsute adornment at these fairs to dealers who make it up into puffs or switches that are in vogue and resell it again in Paris and other cities for big prices.

Hitherto $5 a pound for hair in ordinary brown and dark shades was regarded by the peasants as an excellent price and they parted willingly with their locks at that rate, but last year prices began to rise a little and this year they drove hard bargains. Hair worth $5 previously rose to $10 or $12 a pound, while golden locks fetched $15 and the highest price of all was obtained for a small quantity of silver white hair of fine texture, as much as $25 a pound being paid for one lot.

Never before have the peasants reaped such profits and though there are many shorn heads all through the country the owners are happy in the possession of nest eggs, to help with the dowry or for old age.

In England the puffs so vastly popular for a year or more are being replaced by the braid or coils of hair wound around the head. False hair is just as necessary for this coiffure as the other, for few women have tresses long enough in this day of curling irons and dyes to wind a plait around their heads. With the loss of the puffs comes also the decree of fashion that waves should be abandoned. In fact, English women are wearing the plainest and severest of coiffures after an exaggeration of puffs, curls, waves, jeweled pins, ribbons and flowers that made heads look out of all proportion to the necks and shoulders beneath them.

Hard Names.

Few Americans have trouble in pronouncing the name "Schenectady," although the spelling of it is not always so easy. In "Talks in a Library" Lawrence Hutton tells of an old Scotch laird whose guest one summer was a young lady named Miss Cunningham, who came from Schenectady. "Skinney-taddy" and "Skenk-ter-addy" were as near to it as the laird usually came.

In his eyes the orthographic and orthoepic beam of his own titles and appellations was entirely eclipsed by the marvelous mote known as Schenectady, and he never realized that the inhabitants of the counties of Schenectady, Cattaraugus and Chemung in the state of New York might safely bite their thumbs at the residents of the Shire of Fife in the kingdom of Scotland, until his eyes were opened somewhat rudely, and his sight was, in a way, restored.

"Uncle John," I said to him suddenly one evening when he was in convulsions over Schenectady, "Uncle John, what is the name of your place?"

"Balduthy."

"And of your parish?"

"Aronerauch."

"And of your postoffice?"

"Pittenweem."

"And of your railway station?"

"Killconquhar."

"And still, Uncle John," I continued,

"you, as laird of Balduthy (the vernacular form), elder of the Kirk of Aronerauch, receiving your letters and papers at Pittenweem, and taking your trains at Killconquhar, think Schenectady funny?"

John Hay's Sense of Humor.

Few of our public men have had a more delicate or delicious humor, coupled in an unusual way with a keen and cutting wit. We are fortunate in the preservation of so many of his addresses. Speaking of his frequent opportunities for talking in England, Mr. Hay wrote to a friend: "You never saw a people so willing and eager to be bored as these blessed John Bulls. If I were of the Neronic type, which takes delight in human anguish, I could make a speech every night the year round. But I refrain—being merciful and lazy."

Of a candidate for the presidency, he said: "There seems no limit to his eager credulity. . . . He seems able to believe anything—all he asks is that it shall be incredible." The man's party he characterizes as a "fortuitous concourse of unrelated prejudices."

Describing a collection of sacred relics gathered by Philip II, he playfully writes: "With the exception, perhaps, of Cuvier, Philip could see more in a bone than any man who ever lived. In his long life of osseous enthusiasm he collected 7,421 genuine relics—whole skeletons, odd shins, teeth, toe-nails and skulls of martyrs—sometimes by a miracle of special grace getting duplicate skeletons of the same saint."—Putnam's Magazine.

The Minority Position.

"Saw Peleg down to the public library yesterday. He wuz reading all the old newspapers he could find."

"Yes; he can't remember for sure whether the Panama canal is to be sea level or lock, and whichever it is he's agin it."—Washington Herald.

Optimism.

"Some fish ate the bait right off my hook," she said.

"Cheer up. He'll be all the bigger when you do catch him," he responded encouragingly.—Buffalo Express.

The wife of a dyspeptic man may not agree with him any more than her cooking does.

YOUNG FOLKS

Two Visits.

To visit Aunt Julia is just heaps of fun. We wear our old clothes and we race and we run.

"Go try the new swing," says Aunt Julia, "my dears."

It's put up so firmly you need have no fears;

Since you were here last there's a lot to be seen.

Take a look at my garden, all starting up green.

Don't forget the new chickens out back of the shed,

And when you get hungry there's fresh gingerbread."

When we go to Aunt Esther's, we wear our best clothes,

We hold up our heads and we turn out our toes;

We look at the album with pictures so old,

When father was only a baby, we're told.

But when she says, "Children, here is your treat,

For I know you like sweets and nice things to eat,"

James Brings in a tray, but—the cakes are so small

We could each eat a tray full and not mind at all!

—Youth's Companion.

A Fable for Old and Young.

Once a child who thought well of herself was walking along the street, and saw another child, who was poorly clad.

"How wretched it must be," she said to herself, "to be poor and shabby like that child! How thin she is! And how her patched cloak flutters in the wind; so different from my velvet dress and cloak!"

Just then an angel came along.

"What are you looking at?" asked the angel.

"I was looking at that girl," said the child.

"So was I," said the angel. "How beautifully she is dressed!"

"What do you mean?" said the child.

"I mean this one coming toward us. She is in rags, or at least, if her clothes are not ragged, they are wretchedly thin and shabby."

"Oh, no," said the angel. "How can you say so? She is sparkling white, as clear as frost. I never saw anything so pretty. But you, you poor little thing, you are indeed miserably clad. Does not the wind blow through and through those flimsy tatters? But at least you could keep them clean, my dear, and mended. You should see to that."

"I don't know what you mean!" said the child. "That girl is a ragged beggar, and my father is the richest man in town. I have a white dress and coat, trimmed with expensive fur. What are you talking about?"

"About the clothes of your soul, of course!" said the angel, who was young.

"I don't know anything about souls," said the child.

"I shouldn't think you did," said the angel.—Laura E. Richards.

Lion, Wolf and Fox.

A Lion was old, weak and infirm; all the beasts of the forest presented themselves at his den to pay him their respects. The Fox alone did not appear. The Wolf took this occasion to try to win the favor of the king of animals.

"I can assure your majesty," said he, "that it is only pride and insolence which prevent the fox from appearing before you. He is not ignorant of your illness, and he is only waiting for your death to take possession of the throne."

"Bid him come here," commanded the king of animals.

He came, and, suspecting the Wolf of having played him a bad turn, said:

"I fear, Sire, that some one has blackened my character in your mind; but permit me to give you a faithful account of the reasons for my absence. I was on a pilgrimage, and was fulfilling a vow I made to aid your recovery. I found in my journey skillful and learned people whom I consulted about your malady; I have been so happy as to be informed of an infallible remedy."

"What remedy?" demanded the Lion eagerly.

"It is," responded Master Fox, "the skin of a Wolf, wrapped, all warm and reeking, about your body."

The king of animals approved the remedy. Instantly the Wolf was seized and slain, and the monarch wrapped himself up in the skin.

Those who seek to blacken others by false reports are sometimes the victims of their own wickedness.—Chicago News.

Adverb Game.

One person must go out of the room while the others choose an adverb, such as pleasantly, crossly, slowly or haughtily. When he returns he asks the company questions in turn, which they must answer in the manner of the adverb they have chosen. For instance, if they have chosen "sweetly" for their adverb they must put an extraordinary amount of sweetness into their replies, but if they have chosen "snappily" they must answer in an equally disagreeable manner, or in a spiritless way. The object is for the person who asks the questions to guess from the answer what adverb has been chosen.

One of Nature's Blunders.

During the first year of the Hosfords' residence at their newly acquired country home Mrs. Hosford was in a chronic state of surprise, with many periods of indignation. "Just because I've always lived in the city, they take advantage of my ignorance to make me believe all sorts of stories," she said, plaintively, one night, to her husband. "I have been real provoked, but now I'm just hurt."

"What's happened?" inquired her husband, as he prepared to listen.

"Why, old Mr. Compton, our neighbor down the road, told me that the tree which had the most apple blossoms was likely to have the most apples," said Mrs. Hosford, "and I believed him."

"Seems reasonable," assented her husband.

"Oh, but it's just the other way," said Mrs. Hosford, with considerable heat for a person no longer provoked. "The tree that I got the very most blossoms from, the one that almost decorated the Hibbards' parlor when Margaret was married, has hardly any apples on it at all!"

PERSONS OF MANY NAMES.

Farmer Lad with a Name for Every Letter in the Alphabet.

One cannot help sympathizing with Lieutenant Tollemache, who, after groaning for many years under the burden of seven Christian names containing no fewer than sixty letters, has at last decided to jettison five of them and to be known for the future as plain "Leo de Orellana Tollemache," a designation long enough surely to satisfy any reasonable man.

And yet the gallant lieutenant, according to Tit-Bits, was an enviable person compared with the other members of his many named family, nine of whom share 103 Christian names among them, ranging in number from ten to seventeen, the latter number being the baptismal dower of one of his sisters, who if ever she has time to sign her full name must write: "Lyona Decim Veronica Eayth Undine Cyss Hylda Rowena Viola Adela Thyra Ursula Ysabel Blanche Lellias Dysart Plantagenet Tollemache."

After such an autograph as this one turns with relief to the royal signature of the Empress Dowager of China, which contains but a paltry fifty-nine letters, or to that of a native of Hawaii who is content with fifty-one letters, eight of which are k's and fifteen a's.

That a multiplicity of names is not the prerogative of the higher classes was proved a few years ago when the infant boy of a Buckinghamshire farmer was presented at the font with twenty-six Christian names, each beginning with a different letter of the alphabet, from Abel to Zarahiah and Zachariah, and when a farm laborer handed a list of twenty-one names to the vicar of a church near Tunbridge Wells as the dower of his baby boy. Fortunately for the child, the father was induced to cut down the allowance to half a dozen. Even thus we can imagine that in future years that boy will look with envy on the offspring of a Mr. Penny, who labeled his children One Penny, Two Penny, and so on, up to the full shilling's worth of pennies.

The absurdities of Christian names are illustrated in a Sussex jury list of the seventeenth century which may be seen in the British museum. Among the jurors of that time were Safety-on-High Snot of Uckfield, Kill-Sin Pemble of Westham, Fight-the-Good-Fight-of-Faith White, Small-Hope Biggs, Faint-Not Hirst and Earth Adams, although after all the names are no more remarkable than those given a few months ago to twin infants in the Midlands, who will go through life as Faith Hope Charity Rogers and Penta-teuch Rogers.

Duties of Old-Time Carvers.

At the formal banquet of the sixteenth century the man who carved the meat was bound with the red tape of precedent. When carving for distinguished guests he had to remember that certain parts of the birds or meat must be set aside. In carving for his lord and lady he was expected to exercise great discretion in the size of the pieces he sent around, "for ladies will be soon angry and their thoughts soon changed, and some lords are soon pleased and some not, as they be of complexion." He was expected to have the rules both of the kitchen and the peerage at his knife's end. A pike, for instance, must be dished up whole for a lord, and in slices for commoner folk. The rank of his diners, too, determined whether a pig was to be served up whole, sliced, plain or with gold leaf, or whether new bread or bread three days old should be eaten.

Social Satire.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Gardiner, Maine.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease and weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation but I could not bear to think of it. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. Williams, R.F.D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

So. West Harbor, Me.—"I suffered for years with painful periods, backache, headaches, nervousness, irregularities and inflammation. I consulted two physicians and one advised me to have an operation.

"I was completely discouraged when I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me a well woman. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lillian Robbins, South West Harbor, Me.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

The Bodies Not Recovered.
Chicago, Nov. 9.—All efforts to find any of the bodies of the five or six persons who met their death in a plunge into the Chicago river in an automobile Sunday night have been in vain. The river has been dragged for blocks. A diver has searched all about the river bed near the place where the automobile dropped into the water without finding anything but the broken and battered machine.

REPEATS LAND OFFICE CHARGES

Glavis Writes of Alaska Coal Field Monopoly.

HE ARRAIGNS MR. BALLINGER

Secretary of the Interior Is Again Accused of Failure to Take Steps to Save Immense Beds of Fuel From Fraudulent Entry—Deposed Government Employee Says He Was Removed Unjustly by Mr. Taft.

New York, Nov. 9.—L. R. Glavis, removed in September from the office of chief of field division of the general land office, in an article prepared for Collier's Weekly of Nov. 13 and copyrighted by that publication, says:

"From 1902 to 1909 I was in the field service of the general land office, for the last two and a half years as chief of field division. In September, 1909, I was summarily removed from my position without a formal hearing by Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, by authorization of the president of the United States. That removal was accompanied by the publication of a letter of the president to Mr. Ballinger. I believe that my removal was unfair. I believe the president's letter was grievously unfair, because in it the president gives weight to a charge against me which I never had the opportunity to see or answer. The president states in his letter that I withheld from him information favorable to my superiors. I do not know of any such information withheld by me, nor am I conscious of doing my superiors injustice. Nevertheless, I should not now make any public statement of the matter were it not still possible to save for the government many thousands of acres of coal lands which I believe the land office may in the near future grant to fraudulent claimants.

Coal Lands of Inestimable Value.

"The coal lands of Alaska owned by the government amount to over 100,000 acres. They are the future coal supply of the nation, of almost inestimable value. Possession of them by private individuals means great wealth. A monopoly of them would be a national menace.

"On Nov. 12, 1906, President Roosevelt withdrew all coal lands in Alaska from public entry, but previous to that time there were about 900 claims filed, covering about 100,000 acres, nearly the whole of the coal fields. The law attempts to prevent monopoly of such claims by limiting the amount of each claim and providing that each claimant must take up the land in his own interest and for his own use. This law has been interpreted by the supreme court of the United States to forbid speculating in coal lands before entry, either by dummy entrymen or by previous agreements to consolidate claims after entry. Of these 900 claims to Alaska coal lands, among them the so-called Cunningham group, the majority are fraudulent. [It is asserted that the Guggenheims are seeking a monopoly of the Alaska coal fields.]

"As to the action of the land office on these claims, I assert that the land office ordered the Cunningham claims to patent without due investigation when Commissioner Ballinger knew they were under suspicion; that while in office Commissioner Ballinger urged congress to pass a law which would validate fraudulent Alaska claims; that shortly after resigning from office he became attorney for the Cunningham group and other Alaska claims; that soon after he became secretary of the interior his office rendered a decision which would have validated all fraudulent Alaska claims. A reversal of that decision on every point was obtained from Attorney General Wickersham.

How Glavis Was Dismissed.

"I assert that in the spring of 1909 the land office urged me to an early trial of these cases before the investigation was finished and when Secretary Ballinger, as the president has stated, knew that the Cunningham claims were invalid. When I appealed to Secretary Ballinger for postponement he referred me to his subordinates. The department of agriculture intervened. I was superseded in the charge of the cases, and the man who superseded me endorsed by recommendations, and the postponement was granted. Immediately thereafter I made my report on the Cunningham cases to President Taft and was dismissed from the service for insubordination.

"The president has chosen to treat my report as a charge of criminality. I made no such charge, nor do I make it now. The president's letter is a defense of Mr. Ballinger and Mr. Dennett [commissioner of the general land office] from charges not made in my report to him. I was not investigating either Mr. Ballinger or Mr. Dennett, but the Alaska coal cases."

[The forthcoming article in Collier's Weekly is expected to reopen the entire Pinchot-Ballinger dispute over the disposition of public lands. One of the most bitter official controversies ever known in Washington may follow, and the result may be the retirement from office of either Secretary Ballinger or Gifford Pinchot, chief of the forest service.]

BIG SCANDAL IN SWELL CHURCH

Pennsylvania Town Has a Social Sensation.

PREACHER'S DAUGHTER IN IT

Connected With Her in an Affair Which Has Set the Town of Butler by the Ears Is the Treasurer of the Standard Steel Car Company, Who Is Backed by the Melton Millions—The Rev. Oler Gives Up Pulpit He Has Occupied For More Than Twenty Years When Revelations Concerning His Daughter Are Made.

Butler, Pa., Nov. 9.—Butler has not had such a sensation since the notorious Biddle brothers were run to earth and killed here some years since, as is now holding it through discoveries in the fashionable First Presbyterian church. Rev. Oler, for more than two decades pastor of the church, has left the pulpit and tendered his resignation. Miss Nell Oler, his twenty-eight-year-old daughter, has been forced before the church session with T. N. Gillespie, one of the town's rich men, both members of the church, and the pair are alleged by the church officers to have made confessions which has set the town by the ears and has forced the church authorities to "discipline" the two. Just what punishment has been meted out to the two persons has not been made public by the church body, but it has not been satisfactory to Mrs. Gillespie, who has demanded her papers as a member of the church because the elders have not sent her husband and Miss Oler from the church forthwith.

Gillespie is treasurer of the Standard Steel Car company, which is backed by the Melton millions. He left Butler some days ago, but his friends say he will return to "face the music."

CAN'T UNDO IT NOW

Bride of an Hour Gave Her Husband Up to the Police.

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 9.—Mrs. Pasquale Roman, until Sunday night Miss Elizabeth Andrews, fears the Black Hand will take her life because she betrayed her husband of an hour into the hands of the police Sunday night as a man wanted in Brownsville, Pa., for a murder committed four years ago, and yesterday failed to obtain his release when she learned that she loved him.

Roman is wanted for the slaying of a man in a saloon brawl and a reward of $600 has been offered by the Fayette county authorities.

Mrs. Roman telephoned the police of her husband's identity while she and her husband were awaiting a train to go to Roman's home in Bedford, O. She told the police he forced her to marry him.

Yesterday she sought his release, but Sheriff Johns of Fayette county had arrived and told the police how much wanted Roman was. They told her Roman could not be freed and that he would be hanged if convicted. She upbraided them for disclosing her part of the betrayal and revealed a complete reversal of sentiment.

HAD TWO HOMES

Pension Office Discloses Dual Life of an Indiana Soldier.

Shelbyville, Ind., Nov. 9.—A pension agent, after an effort of several months, has obtained a pension for Mrs. May Reed of this city. She is to receive $12 a month, with $50 arrearages. An investigation showed that Reed, husband of the woman for whom the pension was obtained, led a dual life for a quarter of a century.

Shortly after his death, Mrs. Reed of Fairview, O., and who was wife No. 2, turned up in this city. She found that he had a wife and children living in this city, but that he had left years ago and had disappeared.

The Ohio woman returned to her home heartbroken, for she believed that she was the only wife of the ex-soldier. It was only after a complete search of the court records at Indianapolis and this city that she abandoned hope of claiming a pension. In the meantime the legal widow of the dead man filed a claim for a pension which was carried through all right.

Fined For "Licking" the Editor.
Laporte, Ind., Nov. 9.—Charles McCrory, who assaulted Dr. Karl Freitag, editor of the Michigan City Times, pleaded guilty in Justice Grover's court in this city and was fined $25 and costs, a total of $40.60, which he paid. It was asserted that McCrory had been hired by others whom Freitag had been "going for" in his paper to "lick" the editor.

Didn't Look Before He Leaped.
Elwood, Ind., Nov. 9.—Frank Boyer, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Boyer, was instantly killed by a Lake Erie passenger train. The boy was stealing a ride on a train, and in jumping off a freight car that was running slowly along a siding, landed in front of a rapidly moving passenger train.

Woman's Beauty

Some women retain their beauty to an advanced age. But women, who regularly endure pain, age rapidly, for suffering leaves its lasting marks on them.

Nearly all women suffer more or less with some form of female trouble. It should not be neglected. Avoid the pain—treat yourself at home by taking Cardui, as thousands of other women have done. Begin at once and give Cardui a fair trial.

TAKE CARDUI

It Will Help You

Mrs. Katie Burlison, Goreville, Ill., tried Cardui and writes: "I suffered with female troubles, and was so sick I could not stand on my feet. Finally I began to take Cardui, and soon began to mend. Now I am able to do all my housework and am in much better health than I was before." Try it.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS.

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Seymour Citizen Shows How To Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That's just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to Diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Seymour people testify to permanent cures.

Mrs. Henry Moritz, of 528 West Laurel street, Seymour, Ind., says: "I suffered greatly from lameness across my back and loins. Many times it ached all night and greatly broke my rest. The kidney secretions were irregular and I also suffered from distressing headaches. I gave a statement to the effect that Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of the attack and now after seven years have passed I am glad to confirm my previous statement as I have not suffered from any kidney trouble since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

Wants Conviction Set Aside.

Pittsburg, Nov. 5.—There has been filed in the case of "Kidnapper" Helen Boyle, who is doing twenty-five years in Riverside penitentiary for the Willie Whittle case, an appeal with the superior court of Pennsylvania, asking that her conviction and sentence be set aside and that she be granted a new trial outside of Mercer county.

Lived 152 Years

Wm. Parr—England's oldest man—married the third time at 120, worked in the fields till 132 and lived 20 years longer. People should be youthful at 80. James Wright, of Spurlock, Ky., shows how to remain young. "I feel just like a 16-year-old boy," he writes, "after taking six bottles of Electric Bitters. For thirty years kidney trouble made life a burden, but the first bottle of this wonderful medicine convinced me that I had found the greatest cure on earth." They're a godsend to weak, sickly rundown or old people. Try them. 50c at Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

Gives Him a Fighting Chance.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Joseph Pickering, the seventeen-year-old Casanova seminarian student, who suffered a fractured vertebrae during a football game at Hamilton Saturday, was operated upon at Faxon hospital in this city Sunday. The surgeons state that there is a bare possibility that he will survive.

COULDN'T RESIST

This Man Felt He Just Had to Commit Bigamy.

Columbus, Ind., Nov. 9.—Awaiting a hearing, Jesse Arbuckle, who was arrested at Danville, Ill., on a charge of bigamy filed by his wife, Mrs. Ella Arbuckle of Edinburg, is now in jail here. When brought here from Danville Arbuckle was taken before a justice of the peace, where he pleaded guilty to the bigamy charge and was bound over to the circuit court under a $300 bond.

Arbuckle says he knew he was violating the law when he married a second time in Brown county recently, but he declares he thought his first wife would never hear of it, and he adds that he could not keep from marrying Miss Settle Palmer, wife No. 2 because he loved her so. However, Arbuckle could not keep the secret, and wrote to wife No. 1, asking her to say nothing about his second marriage. Mrs. Arbuckle hurried to this city and filed an affidavit against him.

Huntmen Not Welcome.

Washington, Ind., Nov. 9.—Farmers are busy posting their farms in this county against hunting. The season will open with practically every farm in the county posted. Quail are plentiful here, but hunters will be at a disadvantage unless on good terms with farmers whose farms are posted.

Favorable to the Defense.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The greater part of the time at the Steinhil trial Monday was given over to the testimony of experts. On the whole the evidence adduced favored the accused woman.

Smashes All Records.

LOOK FOR TROUBLE

Bloody Tong Warfare Is Promised in San Francisco's Chinatown.

San Francisco, Nov. 8.—A price of $1,000 has been placed on the head of the On Yick tong, and $500 on the head of each member of the highlander tong by the powerful Yee family, one of whose members was recently shot by On Yick gun men. The result has been to attract Chinese to the city to struggle for this reward. The police believe a bloody warfare will soon break out, as the Yee family have refused all offers of compromise.

Kills to Stop the Fiend.

The worst foe for 12 years of John Deye, of Gladwin, Mich., was a running ulcer. He paid doctors over $400.00 without benefit. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve killed the ulcer and cured him. S.S.S. CURES CHRONIC ULCERS

There is nothing that causes more worry and discomfort than a chronic, festering ulcer. As it lingers, slowly eating into the tissues and surrounding flesh, and by its tendency to grow worse in every way, it suggests the possibility of being cancerous in its nature. Efforts to heal the ulcer by means of salves, washes, lotions, etc., always result in failure, because such treatment can have no possible effect on the blood where the impurities and morbid matters form, and are carried through the circulation to the place, to keep it open, irritated and diseased. The impurities in the blood must be removed before the healing process can begin. S.S.S. goes to the fountain-head of the trouble, and drives out the germ-producing poisons and morbid impurities which keep the ulcer open. Then as this rich, purified blood is carried to the diseased place the healing commences, the inflammation gradually leaves, the discharge ceases, new tissue and healthy flesh are formed, and soon the sore is permanently cured because the source has been destroyed. S.S.S. does not make a surface cure, but by supplying the blood with healthful, tissue-building properties it begins at the bottom and causes the flesh at the diseased spot to firmly and permanently knit together, and the place is left sound and well. Funeral.

The funeral of William Largent, who died at his home at 206 S. Chestnut street, about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, will be held at the church of the Nazarene at two o'clock Thursday afternoon and will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. F. Harvey. Interment will be at Riverview cemetery. Besides the three children mentioned in the REPUBLICAN yesterday, there is another son, Charles Largent, a young man about twenty-eight years of age, who resides at Grandview, Ind., and who returned home last Thursday after spending a week here at the bedside of his father. He is expected here this afternoon to attend the funeral.

The deceased was born and raised in Jefferson county. He resided in Illinois for a while, then at Newtonville, Ind., and later at Marblehill before coming to Seymour. He is an uncle of Peter Largent of this city. He was the youngest of a family of five children all of whom have preceded him to the grave. Among those who are expected here from a distance to attend the funeral are Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Owens, of Washington, and others from Richmond, Columbus and Crothersville. At his own request the deceased will be buried with the honors of war.

Won't Slight a Good Friend.

"If I ever need a cough medicine again I know what to get," declares Mrs. A. L. Alley, of Beals, Me., "for, after using ten bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, and seeing its excellent results in my own family and others, I am convinced that it is the best medicine made for coughs, colds and lung trouble." Every one who tries it feels just that way. Relief is felt at once and its quick cure surprises you. For Bronchitis, Asthma, Hemorrhage, Croup, LaGrippe, Sore Throat, pain in the chest or lungs it's supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

The Sick.

Miss Ella Mount is sick at her home on North Poplar street.

Miss Inez Widener, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Widener is sick at her home on North Ewing street, with fever.

Frank Lemp, who submitted to an operation for appendicitis at Indianapolis a short time ago, is reported to be improving.

Mrs. Lucinda Burkhead, who has been sick for several days, is improving.

Mrs. Mary Forsythe, who is suffering from a dislocated hip, is gradually improving.

Seymour Orange Tree.

Mrs. William Brockhoff has an orange tree which had about forty oranges on it this year. The tree is only about two feet in height, and was raised from a small plant which she secured about four years ago. The fruit is same as that grown in the warmer climate, except that it is considerably smaller. An orange bearing tree is an unusual thing in this part of the country, and it is very seldom that a tree bearing forty oranges is grown in this locality.

Damage Suit.

The case of John Kasting and others against John Garvey for $3000 damages will be tried Friday in the Scott county Circuit Court. The plaintiffs allege that they were the owners of a fine horse which was killed by being kicked by a horse belonging to the defendant. The case was filed in the Jackson county Circuit Court, but venue to Scott county. The plaintiffs are represented by Lewis and Swails and the defendants by Branaman and Branaman of Brownstown.

Civil Service Examination.

The limited States Civil Service Commission will hold an examination at Brownstown Saturday, November 27, for the position of postmaster at Tampico. According to the present law fourth class postmasters are required to pass a civil service examination for the position. Applicants must reside within the territory supplied by the post-office, and must be at least 21 years of age. The Tampico office paid $151 last year.

Whitecap Case.

Bartholomew county whitecap cases are to be tried at the November term of court. The cases are the result of a whipping which Thomas Vance received from the hands of eight or ten men several years ago. Two of the alleged guilty men were tried and convicted, but were granted a new trial by the judge. Since that time the cases have been continued from term to term and have never been tried. The defense wants to try the cases this term or dismiss them from the docket.

A Special Sale of Dress Goods and Silks Friday and Saturday Commanding the Immediate Attention of Women Appreciating Big Bargains

Our dress goods business has been greatly hampered by the spell of unusually warm weather. We must reduce our present enormous stock and it means that the severest price cutting has been resorted to in order to accomplish our end.

A chance to replenish the winter wardrobe with stylish dresses, waists, skirts at a lowered cost without lessening the style and seasonableness of materials. It's a grand opportunity to supply your needs at a LESS PRICE than you would have to pay in a regular way.

Much might be written describing in detail the beauty of the various fabrics included in this sale, but you will admire them all the more by coming to the store and judging for yourself the merit of the values. Here is a partial list of the bargains in which economy can be applied. Any one of them is worth a trip to the store, but perhaps there may be several others of which you wish to take advantage, in which case, all the greater is your reason for coming.

PERSONAL.

F. W. Schmutte went to Richardton, N. D. for a visit.

Dr. A. May was here from Crothersville this morning.

W. H. Godfrey, of Columbus, was in Seymour Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Courtney, of Danville, were in the city today.

Ollie M. Foster, of Vernon township, was in the city this morning.

William Steward made a business trip to Indianapolis Wednesday morning.

Howard Perry, merchant at Surprise, was transacting business here this afternoon.

E. M. Young went to Indianapolis today to attend the National Correspondence School of Law.

Kennedy Foist, who has a good position with the Indianapolis Heat and Light Company, has moved his family to Indianapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Rapp, who have been visiting relatives near Seymour for several days, returned to their home in Johnson county Wednesday.

Artists' Recital.

The audience at the Opera House last night, was delighted with the splendid program, given by the four artists from Indianapolis.

The vocalist, Miss Effa Jeanette Carter, was one of the best ever heard in Seymour. Her voice possessed richness, power and sweetness, qualities which added to her perfect control and splendid training, made the enthusiastic applause of the audience, justly deserved.

The violinist, Miss Katharine Bauer, had once before made her appearance before Seymour audiences and both times has been received with much enthusiasm. She is one of the well-known younger artists of the day, and a brilliant future has been predicted for her. The musical club felt unusually fortunate in being able to secure her for this return engagement.

The pianist, Mrs. Blakeman, was especially well received. Her piano numbers were exceedingly well chosen, and her execution, and interpretation were splendid. She was recalled again and again, and by special request, played a final selection after the conclusion of the program, proper.

The accompanist, Miss Paula Kipp, had also been before Seymour audiences on a previous occasion and her ability recognized. Her sympathetic playing makes her especially well adapted as an accompanist.

When Your Joints are Stiff and your muscles sore from cold or rheumatism, when you slip and sprain a joint, strain your side or bruise yourself, Painkiller will take out the soreness and fix you right. Always have it with you, and use it freely. Avoid substitutes, there is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'. Price 25c., 35c. and 50c.

Large Eagle.

Ernest May, who lives a short distance northeast of Reddington, exhibited a large eagle in Seymour Wednesday which he killed upon his farm. He took his shotgun with him when he went into a field to repair a fence and while he was at work the eagle flew into a tree about one hundred yards from him. Mr. May thought the bird was a large chicken hawk when he first saw it, but when it came nearer he discovered that it was an eagle. He shot it and killed it instantly. The eagle measured seven feet and will make an excellent specimen when mounted. This is one of the first eagles that has been seen around here for several years, and one of the largest that has ever been killed.

Hunting Season Open.

A number of hunters went out this morning to try their skill on the first day of the hunting season. It is reported that game is plentiful this year and there are an unusually large number of quails. The county clerk has been kept busy this week making out hunters' licenses.

Attend I. O. O. F.

All Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are requested to meet at the hall Thursday evening at 6:45 for the parade. Degree work at the opera house at 7:30. Line of march will be in tomorrow's paper.

MY HEART IS MOURNFUL.

My heart, my heart is mournful,
Yet joyously shines the May;
I stand by the linden leaning,
High on the bastion gray.

The blue town-moat thereunder
Glides peacefully along;
A boy in a boat is angling
And whistling a careless song.

Beyond, like a well-known picture,
All small and fair are strewed
Houses and gardens and people,
Oxen and meadows and wood.

The maidens bleach the linen,
And dance in the grass for glee;
The mill-wheel scatters diamonds,
Its far hum reaches me.

Upon the hoary tower
A sentry-box stands low;
A youth in his coat of scarlet
There paces to and fro.

He trifles with his musket,
Which gleams in the sunshine red;
He shoulders and presents it—
I should have shot me dead.

son.

The Favor of a Lady

Mollie was swinging to and fro in the hammock, with an extremely disagreeable expression on her face.

"Hullo," I said, "why aren't you playing tennis?"

She stared at me offensively but made no reply.

"Eh?" I insisted.

"Because my ankles are too thick," she muttered.

I looked at her in amazement.

"If you don't wish to tell me the reason," I said with some dignity, "you can avoid doing so without being either immodest, or—untruthful."

For, as I have said, she was swinging in a hammock.

Mollie was now smiling; she had been pleased to detect some germ of humor in her excuse.

"What's really happened, I suppose," I suggested, "is that you've had your eye wiped?"

"At tennis!" she cried indignantly, raising herself on her elbows.

"Don't be so infantile," I protested; "as if I meant tennis!"

"Oh," said Mollie, "you mean—"

"Just that," I assented.

She struggled into a sitting position.

"Do you think there's anybody in this hole who could? Honestly."

I looked at her meditatively.

"I haven't seen all the girls here yet," I said at length.

"No," said Mollie scornfully, "because the others only come out when it's foggy."

"How depressing for them," I murmured. "Well, if it's not what I said, what is it?"

"It's something quite different."

"Oh!" I said.

"Two in particular," continued Mollie, swinging her feet to and fro.

"Neither of them will leave me alone."

"With the other?" I suggested. "You find it slow, don't you?"

"Oh, shut up," said Mollie; "I'm feeling rotten enough without your beastly jokes. I wish they'd both leave me alone. I wish everybody would leave me alone. For two pins I'd go into a convent. Don't you think it'd be nice in a convent?"

"Yes," I admitted, "but I don't know that you would. I'd try a simpler means of getting rid of my admirers."

At first, anyhow. Wearing that green frock of yours, for example, or doing your hair over your ears, or—

"You needn't be horrid," said Mollie coldly; "I know everything doesn't suit me. And I only did my hair that way once."

I said nothing. When one has nothing to say, silence is not always inadvisable.

Mollie glanced at me meditatively. Then she whistled a bar or two under her breath.

"Besides," she said, striving to look unconcerned, "it's not that which is worrying me, either."

"No?"

"No." She bent back in the hammock and swung herself gently to and fro. It was an even chance that she pitched over on the back of her head. I told her so.

I refrained from comment, and presently she returned to her sheep—or lambs is, perhaps, an apter word.

"Did you ever read? I forgot the name of the book."

"Who's it by?"

Mollie wrinkled her brows for a reflective moment.

"I can't remember that either," she admitted frankly. "I was only a kid when I read it."

"If you knew the color of the cover even," I murmured. "However, I may have read it. I can't say definitely I haven't, anyhow. Why?"

"Nothing," said Mollie; "only—"

There was a girl in there, you know who—I know you'll laugh, you're so mean." She had colored ever so slightly, and avoided my eye. Mollie is essentially modern, and the intrusion of any save the most practical subjects into conversation distinctly discomposes her. Therefore, I guessed something of what she wished to say, and went to her rescue.

"Who had two supplicants for her favor—eh?"

Mollie nodded.

"Yes. And—and they fought (it was quite a kid's book, you know), and she promised the victor, the winner, you know, her—"

"Gloves," I said hastily, because really some of these beauties were most indiscreet in selecting their favors.

"It was a bunch of ribbons, with a matter of fact," said Mollie, with a stare.

"It might have been worse," said I. "Well, what's the idea? Do you propose that—"

"They proposed it," interrupted Mollie in a muffled voice. Had I laughed she would never have forgiven me.

"An excellent idea," I said therefore.

"As a matter of fact, I believe there are some gloves in the house."

"Stupid," said Mollie recovering her composure, "it'll have to be my glove."

"Boxing gloves I mean," I said, mildly.

"As if they'll fight that way," said Mollie scornfully.

"You bloodthirsty little—" I began in horror.

"Don't be so absurd," she cried. "I'm going to make them play tennis. I've just made up my mind. That's what made me so wretched, worrying over what it would be."

"Tennis," I repeated, "and the winner, er, well, the winner wins, I suppose."

Mollie smiled in a superior manner.

"No," she corrected, "the winner loses."

"You see," she explained, "they're the two best players here. And they're about the same class."

"So that the loser must try to lose. Is that the idea?"

"Of course. That'll prove he really means what he says. They're both jolly conceited about their game, so it will be a sure proof that the loser thinks more of me than—than of just winning the game, you know. Especially as I shall make them both promise not to say why they've lost. Don't you think I'm clever?"

"Well, you're ingenious, anyhow," I admitted. "And when is this match coming off?"

"I haven't quite made up my mind yet," said Mollie. "I think the rector's garden party would be a good place, don't you?"

"The rector's garden party! When is it? I haven't heard about it."

"Well, I've said you're going, anyhow. So you must. His daughter's coming home from Vassar or somewhere. You must have heard. Do you think it will be a good place?"

"All places," said I, "seem to be equally suitable. And the rector's presence will certainly have the additional advantage of enabling the loser to console himself."

"Console himself with the rector?"

"I mean," I explained patiently, "console himself with the reflection—"

"I shouldn't go on if I were you," interposed Mollie coldly; "you're rather rude and a little silly. Besides, as if I should marry a couple of boys."

"I hope," I said severely, "that you wouldn't marry a couple of anything. One at a time is ample."

Mollie dropped her eyelids at me disdainfully, and refused to continue the conversation.

"By the way," I cried presently, struck by a sudden thought, "your scheme won't do at all."

"It's jolly well going to, anyhow," she said obstinately. "Why won't it?"

"Not if it's Miss Bessington's homecoming," I said. "She's a great tennis player."

"How do you know? Oh, yes, you have met her, haven't you? What's she got to do with it, anyhow?"

"Well," I ventured, "for one thing, they won't like playing badly in front of her; and for another," I hastened to add—for my first reason appeared to be lamentably unconvincing—"if she knows they're our cracks she won't have much idea of our tennis."

"To be quite candid," said Mollie—when she speaks in the literary style I find it advisable to avoid rilling her further—"I haven't considered Miss Bessington in relation with my scheme."

She jumped out of the hammock and began to walk towards the house.

"And I'm not jolly well going to."

The rector had but recently been appointed to the parish, and his son and daughter, who had been at college for the past year or so, were to make their first bow on the occasion of the garden party. They arrived, however, several days before this epoch-making festival, and young Bessington inaugurated—it was to be hoped—a career of public usefulness by pulling Mollie out of a hedge and administering first aid to her—at that moment more than usually—decrepit motor car which she claims as her own particular property. Having, as he declared, thoroughly repaired it, he pushed it home for her.

He recognized and greeted me with an effusion due, I imagine, less to our previous acquaintance than to the fact that Mollie, in or out of a hedge, merits something of the admiration she demands.

Despite, or it may be owing to, the fact that her car was incapable of running more than five hundred yards without undergoing lengthy, if not exhaustive repairs, Mollie continued to make use of its services.

My friendly inquiries as to the progress her tennis tournament was making received only vague and impatient replies. Nevertheless, from the settled look of gloom on the faces of the two local champions, which I ascribed to the forthcoming triumph of love over sport, I concluded that she had not seen fit to cancel her arrangement.

Mollie announced her intention of going in her car to the rectory, and, with a not altogether disinterested kindness, offered to let me drive her. As I was anxious to meet Miss Bessington once again, I firmly, and I still hold politely, declined.

About an hour after my arrival Miss Bessington informed me that she had certain responsibilities as a hostess, and further, that she was anxious to see the game between our two champions.

Whether Mollie's presence would or would not have counteracted the effect of Miss Bessington and her tennis reputation I am unable to say. As, however, she wandered carelessly away with Bessington almost before the struggle between her two champions began, she missed seeing the hardest-fought set in the memory of the youngest inhabitant.

She did not appear again on the scene until the conclusion of the match—in time to hear Miss Bessington enthusiastically complimenting the players.

Despite the fact that Mollie is my cousin, I have somehow managed to retain some shreds of admiration for her. On this occasion she merited a whole piece. Except for the sparkle in her eyes, she appeared almost pleased, and the tone in which she added her congratulations was, at all events, sufficiently sweet to deceive an inattentive listener.

"Well," I said, when I got her alone.

"Pigs!" she said viciously.

"Apparently," I remarked pleasantly, "they love honor more."

"Honor!" said Mollie scornfully. "They don't know the meaning of the word. They both gave me their word they'd lose."

"Well, one has kept his word," I said judicially; "only if they had both won would they be changed."

"I don't mean those circumstances," she explained, damaging the turf with the point of her sunshade.

"What others are there?" I asked in surprise.

"Others!" cried Mollie indignantly. "There's only one."

"Well, it, then. What is the circumstance?"

But as Bessington came up at this moment, my question received, and required, no answer.—Pennsylvania Grit.

THINK IT OVER.

Difficult Position of Convicted Man on Release from Prison.

Here is a story that will be of interest to the humanitarian. We are inclined to think it contains a considerable amount of truth, Collier's says:

"I was discharged from San Quentin six weeks ago. I was given a new suit of clothes (that was branded 'prison all over, but no matter about this). I was given clothes to cover me, $5 in cash, and the good wishes of the warden and the man who drives the van. Very good, you say, for an ex-convict? Well, listen to this. On the day I was given my freedom, my picture, with my description, was sent to every sheriff of every county in the State: This man is free—may be coming your way. Look out for him! Now, there is nothing dangerous about me, or, at least, there never was. I was a street car conductor, a decent enough sort, when one night I got drunk and hit a man. Unfortunately for both of us, I nearly killed him. I got four years. I paid the penalty. Should I be let alone now or not? I gave more than four years out of my life to the State. I lost my health. For that reason I thought that, being 'free,' I would go out into the country and work there until I got my strength back. From county to county I have been told to move on. The first man to whom I applied for work gave it to me; then I took my honorable discharge out of my pocket and showed it to him. He picked up a cane that lay across his desk and yelled at me: 'You get out of here or I'll knock your brains out.'"

It is needless to draw any facile moral from this condition. The facts are intricate. The difficulties are many. A bitter situation faces the prisoner who wishes to lead an honorable life after his discharge. A delicate situation faces the man who would employ him. The employer knows the rule: it requires some sacrifice to principle and humanity on his part to test the particular case in order to avoid helping to crush a man who may be one of the exceptions. Sentimentalism in the treatment of crime is not to be encouraged, but injustice is still worse.

"A YANKEE OF ALBANIA."

He was an old Albanian farmer from back in some mountain valley, three or four days' journey from the city, and had come in with the other farmers of the village to attend the annual fair. Perhaps he had brought a goat, or a donkey, or a little bag of corn to turn into money. Whatever it was, he had evidently been successful, for he was now proposing to indulge in a luxury no less than a real European-enameled bowl.

Other farmers had sold their corn and donkeys, and sheep, or wool, as doubtless he had done, for Martinis and cartridge belts and cartridges; but these had not been luxuries. They were as necessary as food and clothing; for life, cheap as it was behind the gun, was cheaper than a rabbit's without it.

That was last year and the year before and the hundreds of years before that one, when a price was on every man's head, and only his wit and his grit and his gun brought him through.

Even to-day, under the constitution and the principles of liberty, equality, fraternity and justice, the old primal tides of passion surge upward and break bounds again and again. Two neighbors disputed the other day over the amount of water each was drawing from the common stream, and the gun settled the dispute; but the present is better, as this old man proved.

Picture him in his homespun suit of wool, neither bleached nor dyed. A little skull-cap, a short jacket, trimmed with heavy black braid, trousers skin-tight and laced to the knees, moccasins of untanned hide and bound with thongs—thus was he clothed.

His face had a month's growth of beard, grizzled gray, his skin was tanned copper-color by sun and exposure; but the wrinkles did not lie deep and a twinkle in his eye relieved the face of somberness.

After many minutes of sorting and comparing he selected a white enameled bowl and asked the price.

"Ten metaliks"—ten cents—was the answer.

The farmer responded by offering six, and then the battle of wits began.

The merchant refused, but after much parleying, "as a special concession and favor to an old man," he would take nine.

The farmer would give six and a half, but he could afford no more. He was poor and he was old, and he had come far, and the trader was taking advantage of him.

Finally the trader said: "You are an old man and I cannot dispute with you longer; give me eight metaliks."

The old farmer pulled a small, dirty cotton bag out of his pocket, slowly untwisted the string and counted out seven metaliks, laid them on the table and started off.

The merchant called to him, protesting he could not accept them; he was already selling the bowl for less than he would to anybody else; but the farmer held his ground, arguing his case again from first to last, insisting he had paid more than the article was worth. But when the merchant called to his clerk to take the money to him and receive back the bowl, with a sigh of resignation, he again opened the money bag and searched out a half metalik, which he tendered, and which, although vehemently protesting against it, the merchant accepted, and the transaction was done.

Then the salaams: "May you have many years added to your life. May many sons be added to your family. May you live in health. May your harvest be abundant. I will eat from this bowl to your lordship's health and happiness," saying which, with a salute of the hand, he passed out into the street.

Has he not well earned the title, "A Yankee of Albania?"—Youth's Companion.

Jasper's Lofly Aim.

John Allen of Tupelo, who while in Congress used to be known as "Private John," enjoys telling of a unique character near his home known as "Jasp" White. Jasp had lived in single blessedness a good many years, but finally, in the evening of his life, he married, and in due time an heir was born to him. The day after this momentous event, a writer in Lippincott's Magazine states, Mr. Allen met Jasp in the street.

"I understand, Jasp," said the "Private," "that you've a fine baby boy up at your place. Have you decided on his name?"

"Yes, suh," chuckled Jasp, "we's already decided on a name."

"What's it to be?"

Jasp traced one toe reflectively in a semi-circle before him. "You know, suh," he said, finally, "I's allus been a pow'ful han' fer dem Scripture folks, an' so I's decided 't name de kid after some o' dem big officers whate de Bible talks 'bout. I's settled on de name Beelzebub."

"Beelzebub?"

"Yes, suh, dat's de name!" announced Jasp, in a tone betokening finality. "Beelzebub's a mighty fine name, suh. It shore looks like I's aspirin' pow'ful high, but I figgers dat boy'll be a credit to his name."

TOTAL LOSS OF HAIR.

Seemed Immature—Scalp Was Very Scaly and Hair Came Out by Handfuls—Scalp Now Clear and New Hair Grown by Cuticura.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my coat by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Pa., May 7 and 21, 1908."

Why He Got His.

The vendor of images, who had just been thrown out of a large office building, wept bitterly as he looked at his torn clothes and broken wares.

"Who did this?" inquired the friendly cop. "I'll pinch 'em if you say the word."

"No; it was my fault," said the victim, gathering up the remains of a plaster image. "I insisted on trying to sell a bust of Noah Webster to a meeting of simplified spellers."—Denver Republican.

Wellesley Oak 500 Years Old.

A wide-spreading oak which experts have declared must have been growing at the time of the discovery of America by Columbus, is a landmark on the estate of the late Arthur Hunnewell in Wellesley, Mass.

The magnificent tree measures 26 feet in circumference at the base. It is a noticeable landmark on account of its unusual size. It intersects the fence which separates the fertile fields of the Hunnewell estate from the highway, and thus arrests the attention of the passer-by.

The late Mr. Hunnewell took great pride in the ancient tree. It has withstood the ravages of pests for a great many years and is apparently in condition to live for a great many more decades. The late Mr. Hunnewell once had the tree examined by an expert from the Smithsonian Institute, who declared that it was between 400 and 500 years old.

El'ot, the apostle to the Indians, frequently passed the towering oak while going to and from South Natick, where he preached to the Indians, the tree being beside what was the old trail.

FOOD QUESTION.

Settled with Perfect Satisfaction by a Dyspeptic.

It's not an easy matter to satisfy all the members of the family at meal time as every housewife knows.

And when the husband has dyspepsia and can't eat the simplest ordinary food without causing trouble, the food question becomes doubly annoying.

An Illinois woman writes:

"My husband's health was poor, he had no appetite for anything I could get for him, it seemed."

"He was hardly able to work, was taking medicine continually, and as soon as he would feel better would go to work again only to give up in a few weeks. He suffered severely with stomach trouble."

"Tired of everything I had been able to get for him to eat, one day seeing an advertisement about Grape-Nuts, I got some and he tried it for breakfast the next morning."

"We all thought it was pretty good, although we had no idea of using it regularly. But when my husband came home at night he asked for Grape-Nuts."

"It was the same next day and I had to get it right along, because when we would get to the table the question, 'Have you any Grape-Nuts?' was a regular thing. So I began to buy it by the dozen pkgs."

"My husband's health began to improve right along. I sometimes felt offended when I'd make something I thought he would like for a change, and still hear the same old question, 'Have you any Grape-Nuts?'"

"He got so well that for the last two years he has hardly lost a day from his work, and we are still using Grape-Nuts." Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

WANTED Lady or Gentleman of fair education to travel for firm of large capital. Salary $1,072 per year, payable weekly. Expenses advanced. Address George G. Clova, Dept. A, Philadelphia

The proprietor of a large downtown barber shop has found it necessary to publicize his force of manicurists, and says that at the present rate of business increase he will soon be compelled to put another booth in his place. He said that this did not show any increased desire on the part of his customers to keep their nails in good form, but rather the development of the manicure habit. "I would go right back to one nail doctor in a week," he said, "and that would eventually become a poor business, if I sent the girls away and took men in their stead. Our girls make from $15 to $20 a week. A man just as capable could not earn one-half that amount. That's the manicure business."—New York Tribune.

THE INDIANA Y. M. C. A. TO MEET AT KOKOMO

Program of Unusual Excellence
Arranged.

Kokomo, Ind., Nov. 10.—During the four days beginning Nov. 18 the fortieth annual convention of the Indiana
Young Men's Christian Association will be held in this city. Much interest is being taken in the coming meeting because Kokomo people have just passed through a campaign for subscriptions to a Y. M. C. A. home here in which $90,000 was contributed to the association, and everything possible will be done for the comfort and entertainment of the hundreds of visitors who will be here during convention week.

A program of unusual excellence
has been arranged for the convention, the general theme of which will be
"the Association's Supreme Objectives."
Rev. Clarence A. Barbour,
D.D., secretary of the international committee, speaking Thursday night
upon "The Age-Long Conflict."

A religious work institute will occupy nearly all of Friday forenoon, in charge of the state religious-work committee. Special leaders will open Bible study, men's meetings, and other topics.

Shop meetings in the principal Kokomo factories will be conducted by convention speakers and delegates Friday noon. The anniversary supper will be Friday evening. A "vision of the future" will be opened that night
by Indiana's best-known young man—
Albert J. Beveridge, United States senator. The business discussions of the convention will be given more time than usual. Sunday, the "great day of the feast," all churches will be occupied by speakers from the convention.

THE WARRINER SHORTAGE

Mrs. Stewart, Said to Be "The Woman
In the Case," Is in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, Nov. 10.—Until late last evening the whereabouts of Mrs. Jeannette Timmins Ford Stewart, which is the correct name of the woman who has been mentioned in the Big Four defalcation case which involves
Charles L. Warriner, was a mystery.
She has been searched for in several cities, according to the statements of officials here, but it was learned definitely that Mrs. Stewart is at her flat in the Sun building, Thirteenth and Bremen streets, Cincinnati. She was supposed to have gone away, but the detectives of the Big Four are said to have gone to her house two days before the exposure of the shortage of Warriner and to have told her that she must remain here. It is said that four detectives are watching her home and that one is stationed inside the house with Mrs.
Stewart. County Prosecutor Henry
Hunt said that he would ask the grand jury to indict Warriner in two weeks.
Chief Counsel L. J. Hackney of the Big Four, who has taken charge of the Warriner case, says that he will be brought to trial at an early date and that the road will push the case and endeavor to have him put in prison for the rest of his life.

The rumor that the road does not want Warriner arrested or prosecuted has been circulated here, but Vice President John Cranston, General
Treasurer Cox and General Auditor
Hewitt all say this is false.

"Even if rebates were being given by the road, Warriner would have known nothing about them," said Mr.
Hackney. "The charge that we will not prosecute him is false. He is under bond for $50,000. That amount was all the bond the company was responsible for. If he stole more the road must either get it back or use other methods. This is what we are going to do."

It is now said that the shortage disclosed in Warriner's case may reach more than a half million dollars.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and
should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order,
you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr.
Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best.
Sold by druggists in
fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle
by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you
how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

TARIFF AGITATION PUT UNDER THE BAN

Manufacturers Don't Want the Subject Revived.

New York, Nov. 10.—The following statement in connection with the tariff has been given out by President Kirby of the National Association of Manufacturers: "The National Association of Manufacturers is absolutely opposed to any revival of tariff agitation.
The association feels that the tariff question has been disposed of by congress and that any attempt to revive the subject will serve not only unnecessarily to agitate business men in general, but also will retard the return of prosperity. Reports received by our association from its 3,000 members throughout the country indicate a healthy and decided increase in business. There is every proof that we are at the beginning of an extended period of national prosperity. This condition is most desirable and is of vital importance, not only to the country at large, but also to every employer and wage earner. Tariff revision cannot be carried on without causing business unrest. We have had enough of it, and as manufacturers we insist that the tariff act be given a fair trial before inaugurating an agitation which can serve no good purpose in the present attitude of the people.
I regret to say that, for reasons unknown, certain published statements are being circulated, whether maliciously or otherwise, to the effect that the National Association of Manufacturers is planning a campaign for further tariff revision. These statements are absolutely false and have no foundation whatever. As president of the National Association of Manufacturers
I cannot say too emphatically that no such action has been considered or even suggested."

three miles south of here. He and his wife had quarreled over a son who had run away.
